

What is Art?

Formatted: Centered

First paragraph:

We don't use the word 'believe' in any future essays, Ok? It makes your argument weak. We can state the facts, or we can say that 'it is said that..' 'Opinions vary'.. (which is how people think, but not how you personally think, because what you feel isn't enough. Now is the time to do your homework. We also need an introductory sentence, which you don't have." ...there is no good or bad answer to 'this' question..."

A couple of introductory starting positions could be the following:

One definition of the word 'art' might be found in the dictionary as being "the expression or application of human creative skill and imagination, typically in a visual form such as painting or sculpture, producing works to be appreciated primarily for their beauty or emotional power."

"...art is supposed to have the power to provoke, the authority of a heartfelt vision." In my understanding, art is inspiration. The process of being inspired encourages positive emotions which then lead to the process of innovation. In Dorothy Allison's essay, Allison makes a remark referencing her art being the mind of others as well. She revealed that her work beings to us; we can all relate to her personal opinions and experiences.

In other words, the definition of art has been defined so many times, that it is certain you shouldn't just pick a definition out of the blue without looking into how other people define it.

In other words, you can't use pronouns such as 'this' before you define what this is. If I ask you, "What makes volleyball so enjoyable?" You can't start with 'it'. You MUST start with "Volleyball is so enjoyable because..."

You also use "I strongly believe"..."in my point of view" in the same paragraph and even the same sentence. Sometimes redundancy can work, but it has to have meaning. This is redundancy is without meaning, showing a very weak argument.

So, after you've made your assertion, based on your research, it could be time for you to reformat your original sentence, if you so choose. You could do it with something like the following: ...In other words, art is expression, creativity, which means creating something new, but it is art because everyone will have a disparate (don't use basic words: different, nice, good, funny...) perception on the particular subject matter, no matter how large or small.

Second paragraph:

I don't understand the first sentence because I can't read it.

Dada is art because it makes people think. (??) Who's this guy? You must have an introduction to the topic. ...As far as paintings go, there are many styles from many eras. One of my favorite types of art is called Dadaism, which was an art movement of the European avant-garde in the early 20th century; (I copied this from Wikipedia – don't plagiarize, but make comments of substance. You're comments have little substance.) it is an art movement that developed in reaction to World War I, the Dada movement consisted of artists who rejected the logic, reason, and aestheticism of modern capitalist society, instead expressing nonsense, irrationality, and anti-bourgeois protests in their works.

Oh, I see that you are confused as to how to make a paragraph. You just throw in Dada art in the second paragraph, then you define it in the third, but the first reference doesn't have any meaning to the paragraph's introduction, which was: 'Art, because the art says it's art (??).

a movement that (not which). The use of 'which' is usually for non-defining relative clauses.

..that is haunted..the purposes were clear...Through painting....???? Misuse of 'they'. Who are 'they'?

Paragraph 4

It's very provocative. How?? In his opinion, interesting about the moustache and the 'art is art' thing.

(New paragraph) In 1917....I can't read the next statement...One critic says...can't read...Without a doubt, ..

change 'if you look at' to 'if someone were to look at'

can't read the next statement.

All in all, can't read..

Notes: If you could send it to me from a text editor, it'd be easier for me. All in all, it's a good start.

What is out?

I strongly believe there is no god or God answer to this question. Instead in my point of view, it is capitalism, greedily, breaking something new, but not even means the same thing to everyone.

And, because the answer says it's not, it has been a long time about putting in the Bible about an answer, it has not. (Anyone can do it. What I am? I don't but make people think.)

There was an experiment which started by a group of artists during the First World War. The origin of the name Dada is not certain but the purpose of the movement was clear. Through painting, literature, poetry, sculpture, they wanted to express their ideas. Instead of being traditional and a boring. They wanted to create something new. They saw, and it was a freedom, and there is no definition of freedom. They believed in something as freedom. That is it.

There was a religious very progressive. You just have to look at the works of Marcel Duchamp the French artist in his opinion and especially create for the eye, but in a sense to create and for the mind the more an object and the more he makes a movement to a copy of the Mona Lisa and with his Dadaist ideas he was saying the same, because the same says it's not. In 1917 he wrote an article with a free name, which is "Fountain" and it is an object. It was rejected to put Dada world of art was rejected by most artists. Despite their works were completely different from the traditional painting and sculpture. One could see Dada was the movement and was determined being produced by new letters. In short if you want some of the things, some of the things, you can see the influence of Dada. There is no definition, completely can be and not. There are no rules.

All in all there is a part of me that says something about if it includes and includes, but when I see a picture in a gallery with a label for me the first time (I can't say), I don't think again, unless you question. What is out?
